

Hello, my name is Ashley Torres, and I was born in East Los Angeles, California, where I lived until moving to Pico Rivera. I graduated from El Rancho High School. Some of my interests include painting, reading, swimming, and listening to music.

I became interested in engineering because of robotics in middle school, and as I learned more about computer science and hardware, I became interested in pursuing Computer Engineering.

I enjoy learning about anything STEM related and how it is used in daily life.

My mom is my greatest influence, she inspires me to work hard everyday, and never stop working towards my goals.

I chose UCLA because the engineering program here is not only good, but the people are also very welcoming. I like how there are so many things to explore around campus, as well as all the different events here are really fun.

I plan on pursuing a Master's Degree, and then either my PhD, or start working in a tech company in the future.
