

EE Fast Track Student Profile: Benjamin He

Hi, my name is Benjamin He (I go by Ben), and I was born in Kansas City, Missouri. I attended Lake Oswego High School in Lake Oswego, Oregon, and I am currently an undergraduate student at UCLA majoring in Electrical Engineering. I chose to study Electrical Engineering primarily because I am very interested in the perpetually expanding field of electronic technology. I also enjoy problem-solving and doing math and physics, which are other reasons why I chose this field. I first got involved with engineering during high school when I interned at MIT under a professor of the Department of Chemical Engineering. I also participated in robotics and was able to learn some Java coding from it, which I found really fun and fascinating. While I am interested in the hardware aspect of electronics, I find interest in the software aspect as well. I'm not entirely sure what industry I'd like to work in the future, but, with the myriad of student organizations, classes, and opportunities available here at UCLA, I am excited to learn plenty of practical engineering skills and knowledge.
