

Jonathan Xue

Hi! My name is Jonathan Xue, and I've lived in San Diego, California pretty much my entire life. Growing up, I really enjoyed playing table tennis and piano and also loved hanging out with my friends throughout high school and beyond.

I'm a Computer Engineering major. My interest in Computer Engineering developed initially from a digital electronics course I took in my high school. I loved the challenge and creativity needed to design various digital circuits to realize a certain function. Combined with my interests in computers, I knew that Computer Engineering was the major for me.

Aside from being strong academically and providing me with tons of resources to help me succeed, I ended up choosing to study at UCLA because I really liked the overall atmosphere here. UCLA feels very inviting and lively. In addition, I can't live without the great weather here in SoCal after having lived in San Diego for so long.

I'm currently interested in digital circuits and am looking towards pursuing either a Master's or PhD. Aside from that, I'm still not too sure as to what my career aspirations are.
