

Justin Oh

Hi! I'm Justin. I was born not too far from Los Angeles in Santa Barbara, but I was raised for the majority of my life in Palo Alto, where I attended Henry M. Gunn High School. I'm a huge coffee nerd: I love to explore the different flavors presented by the different varietals, origins, and processes of coffee. Some of my other hobbies include going to the gym, playing the violin, and photography.

I was drawn to UCLA by the California sunshine, abundance of Korean food nearby, and in-state tuition. Since arriving here, I've had my decision to come here affirmed by the welcoming, supportive, and innovative engineering community. My interests include problem-solving, physics, and building things, so electrical engineering seemed like a smart choice (I'm also hoping to double major in physics). It would be wrong of me to not credit my parents (both of which are engineers) for imbuing me with a love of problem-solving and curiosity.

I'm not sure whether my career will lead me to academia, industry, or perhaps some combination of the two. I've enjoyed my time working in an academic research lab, but I would also like to explore industry before I make any big decisions. Regardless, I know that I will pursue a career that I can continue to experience the joy of problem solving in.
