

Katherine Sohn

Computer Engineering, Fast Track Class of '25

Hello! My name is Katherine Sohn and I am from North Potomac, Maryland. At a young age, I enjoyed collecting household items such as empty toilet paper rolls and old cardboard boxes and building contraptions from soda machines. By junior year, I was leaning towards majoring in computer science, but I knew I didn't want to sacrifice my love for working with my hands – so UCLA's ECE Computer Engineering major turned out to be a perfect fit for me!

Outside of my major, one of the most important things to me is dance. In addition to running my own social media presence as a UCLA Ambassador under the Connect club, I also became a member of Koreos, an established K-pop cover team on campus. I have also gotten involved in the Asian American Christian Fellowship, where I have formed many of my closest friendships and support networks.

While I am currently focusing on pursuing my B.S. in Computer Engineering and have yet to find exactly what career would best suit my skill set and working style, I am excited to explore the wide variety of options and build my real-world experience as soon as possible thanks to the UCLA ECE Fast Track program!
