

Hi! My name is Spencer Atkin and I am studying Computer Engineering at UCLA. I am originally from Arlington, Virginia, a suburb of DC. I attended Thomas Jefferson High School for Science and Technology, a STEM-focused magnet school, which allowed me to take advanced classes in Computer Science.

I really enjoy working with computers, and I did a lot of programming in my free time in high school, as well as at various internships. I make iOS apps, and I currently have 3 on the App Store. I am also interested in cybersecurity and online privacy, and I have done some offensive hacking.

In college I aim to continue to work on programming-related side projects, and hopefully get involved in research. I also play electric guitar, and I hope to find a band to play with. I am very excited for the many opportunities that await me at UCLA!
