

Hi there! My name is Sydney, and I am an electrical engineering student at UCLA. My interest in science and technology is strongly influenced by my father. His passion for physics and mathematics inspired me from a young age. Moreover, my exposure to computer science, physics, and calculus in high school convinced me to pursue engineering as a career. I'm excited about the opportunities UCLA offers, and I'm looking forward to further developing my academic passions and ambitions.